WHY AREN'T THEY MOTIVATED & WHAT CAN WE DO ABOUT IT?

A frequent complaint among faculty and academic staff is the number of students who don't seem very motivated to learn or do their work. In this workshop we will explore this issue, consider some different perspectives on the "motivation problem," and discuss research-based principles of effective motivation.

There will be plenty of opportunity for discussion and a chance to share both your concerns and your best ideas for addressing this eternal teaching issue.

PRESENTER

Greg Valde • Associate Professor & recipient of several teaching awards
Department of Educational Foundations
