

Incorporating Low-Stakes Writing Into Any Sized Class

12:30 – 2:30 p.m.

January 29, 2013

UC 259A

Assigning more writing means more grading, right? Not necessarily.

This workshop will offer practical ways to use low-stakes writing assignments to enhance student learning without adding substantially to your grading load. We will draw on the work of composition theorists Peter Elbow and John Bean to see how low-stakes writing assignments can help our students be active learners and develop their critical thinking skills. We'll also discuss how these assignments can be instrumental to our development as more effective instructors.

Facilitator: Dr. Dana Prodoehl is a member of the Department of Languages and Literatures at UWW. She has worked with leading members of the writing community including Brad Hughes, Paula Gillespie and John Bean and has facilitated workshops for faculty on Writing Across the Curriculum at UWW and Marquette University.

*LUNCH INCLUDED

RSVP DEADLINE: January 22, 2013

To reserve a place, please contact:

LEARN Center 262.472.5242 or learn@uww.edu.

Register online at: <http://signup.uww.edu> using your Net-ID.

The workshop is listed under "LEARN Center."

LEARN
center