Acting

- Learn to make your voice work for you.
- Learn how to be calm, yet dynamic, in audition situations.
- Develop your body as an instrument through body work, flexibility, and adaptability exercises.
- Through script analysis, learn how to pace scenes, getting to the right place at the right dramatic moment.
- Develop the ability to work successfully in ensemble situations.
- Through improvisation, learn to explore your imagination.
- Through self-exploration, become more aware of how you look, think, feel, imagine, move, talk, etc.
- Work on a scene to be presented at the end of the week.

Design and Technical Theatre

- Learn the important elements of costume and scene design.
- Learn how to light a set dramatically.
- Work on a state-of-the-art computerized light board.
- Develop stage management skills.
- Assist in preparing scenes to be presented at the end of the week.

Sponsorship

Many times high school drama clubs, civic organizations and local art groups will sponsor participants to camps such as this. Sponsorships are generally offered in the form of awards to students who have demonstrated an interest in theatre through their participation in high school and community theatre events.

If you are interested in seeking a scholarship to the UW-Whitewater Theatre Camp from an organization in your community, fill out the reverse side of the application form and submit it to a potential sponsoring organization.

Camp Director

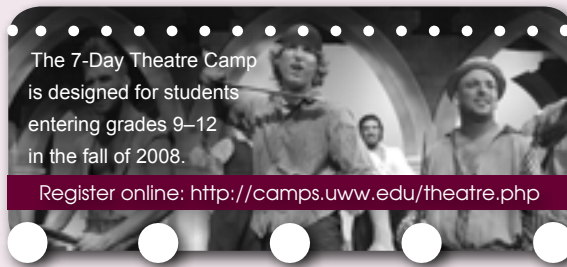

Dr. Charles Grover, originator and director of the 7-Day Theatre Camp, is an Associate Professor in the Department of Theatre/Dance at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater. A teacher of directing, acting, movement, and voice, Dr. Grover also directs several plays each year, teaches theatre history and dramatic literature, and supervises student teachers preparing to enter secondary teaching in theatre. Recent productions he has directed are Guys and Dolls, Once Upon a Mattress and Pirates of Penzance. Dr. Grover received the 2004 Outstanding Theatre Educator Award from the Wisconsin Alliance for Theatre Education.

Technical Director

Stephen Chené is the Technical Director for the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater's Department of Theatre/Dance and has designed sets and lights for various productions for the University. Previous credits include Technical Director and/or Lighting Designer at Bucknell University, Gainesville College, Madison Savoyards, Tecumseh!, Nebraska Theatre Caravan, and Bloomsburg Theatre Ensemble.

Benefits of the 7-Day Camp

- Improve your theatre skills during an enjoyable, dynamic, intense week of instruction and training.
- Theatre professionals will focus workshops on individualized activity and involvement.
- The enrollment of this camp is limited to 50-60 high school students in order to maximize the opportunities for individualized attention.
