

Beyond “Well, that sounded like an A” The Speaking Well Rubric

March 11, 2013 • 12:00 – 1:00 p.m. • UC 261 • Lunch Included

Speakers: Sally Vogl-Bauer, Kathy Brady, Tammy French, Barb Penington

There are many factors that constitute competent “Oral Communication” (one of LEAP’s Essential Learning Outcomes). While this is not the only important aspect to what constitutes competent oral communication skills, there is strong agreement that giving competent speeches or presentations is an important and valuable skill set we want all students at UW-Whitewater to be able to demonstrate.

In May, 2012, a group of colleagues from each of the four academic colleges and Student Affairs worked together to create the “Speaking Well” rubric to help assess students’ presentation skills. This workshop is intended to formally introduce the “Speaking Well” rubric to the entire campus. The hope is that this tool will assist the campus in examining students’ oral communication competencies when giving presentations.
