Before recording with one another, both Jamie Dailey and Darrin Vincent had already seen the ins and outs of fame and Bluegrass music. At the age of three both boys found themselves experimenting with different instruments, getting the feel of what would later become their career and lifelong passion. Growing up with a family that played Bluegrass music made it even easier for these two to get started. Choosing the instruments they enjoyed the most; both kept up with their practice and love of music until they made their dreams come true. Dailey who entered the music industry in 1998 served as lead vocalist and guitarist for Doyle Lawson & Quicksilver, while Darrin entered the Music business as a member of Ricky Skaggs and The Kentucky Thunder. After years of winning numerous awards and working with major names in the music industry such as Dolly Parton; Jamie and Darrin teamed up in 2007 to form the group Dailey and Vincent and have produced hit albums together ever since.
