To: Students and Staff at UW-Whitewater
Date: October 5, 2015

UW-Whitewater has experienced a total of eleven (11), lab-confirmed cases of mumps since the start of the fall semester. For this reason, we are asking that you be on alert for the symptoms of mumps. Even if you have been vaccinated for mumps, there is still a chance you can contract the disease.

Symptoms may include pain and or swelling below the jaw with accompanying fatigue, low grade fever, headache, body aches and or loss of appetite. Should you experience symptoms, call UWW Student Health to be evaluated, 262-472-1300 or your personal health care provider.

If unsure of your immunization status, or don’t have 2 doses, contact campus health services for vaccination.
