

Satisfactory Academic Progress (SAP) Appeal Form

In order to receive financial aid, students must comply with the three eligibility standards of satisfactory progress: qualitative (cumulative GPA), quantitative (% of attempted credits completed), and maximum time frame. Students not meeting one or more of these standards are ineligible for financial aid until they again meet the standards. If students have experienced circumstances beyond their control that caused them not to meet these requirements, they may appeal the loss of their financial aid following the process outlined on this form. Additional information regarding SAP may be found here: <https://www.uww.edu/financialaid/policies/academic-progress>.

Please thoroughly review this form and submit all of the required materials for your appeal to the UW-W Financial Aid Office (via email, mail, or fax – addresses and numbers listed at the top of this form) in the following order: SAP Appeal Form, Personal Statement, and then Supporting Documentation.

If you have been academically dismissed, this appeal for Satisfactory Academic Progress does NOT replace the need to submit an academic appeal through the Academic Standards Office.

2. Indicate what circumstances have changed that will allow you to maintain financial aid eligibility for the requested and future terms of enrollment. What changes have you made to ensure that you will successfully complete the required credits and/or GPA needed to maintain satisfactory progress in the future?
