Kanopy Streaming Changes

Kanopy Streaming has become a popular resource for delivering academic films to our students. However, the pricing model has become unsustainable for the Library.

So beginning Monday, February 17, we will implement a mediated (i.e., reviewed) model for selecting Kanopy films.

Any film that is not yet licensed can be searched for in Kanopy and requested through the form that Kanopy provides. Librarians will review your request and reply to you with a license decision.

Faculty and instructors who are using the film for a class will be given first priority. We will do our best to fulfill faculty requests as funding allows.

Film access will typically be available within two business days after a decision is made. Any film which is already licensed will still be available on-demand as usual. Records for all current film licenses will appear in Research@UWW with the current license dates.

See the Library Blog for information on  other streaming film collections.

Nancy has a BS in Computer Science from University of South Florida and an MLIS from UW-Milwaukee. She has a special interest in library assessment and OA/OER content and how it can relate to student success.
