MEMORANDUM

To: University of Wisconsin Whitewater, Master Plan Working Committee
 Re: Impact of Increased Utilization Expectations

There is discussion that The University of Wisconsin System will be increasing its utilization targets for classrooms and class laboratories. At the time of this analysis, the decision to increase the utilization targets had not been made; however, UW System wanted to understand the impact of this potential utilization increase. The tables below show UW Whitewater's Fall 2012 utilization rates, the UW System's current expectation, and the potential utilization targets for both classrooms and class laboratories.

Currently UW Whitewater is scheduling its classrooms 25% lower than the current utilization expectations. At the potential utilization targets, UW Whitewater will be scheduling its classrooms 35% less than the potential expectations. For class laboratories, the Fall 2012 utilization rates were 23% less than current utilization expectations which would increase to 43% less than the potential utilization targets.

IMPACT ON THE SPACE NEEDS ASSESSMENT

The impact of the potential increase in utilization targets is significant for the space needs assessment outcomes in both the classrooms and class laboratories space categories.

Using current UW System utilization targets, classroom space shows an overage for Fall 2012 of about 8,500 NASF which turns into a deficit of about 10,800 NASF for the future enrollment level of 13,857 students. Should the proposed utilization target of 40 hours per week be implemented, there would be a significant overage of 24,600 NASF for Fall 2012 which would decrease to an overage of 8,000 NASF for the future enrollment level.

Class laboratories, using existing UW System utilization expectations, are in relative balance with an overage of about 1,100 NASF. For the future enrollment growth, the overage becomes a need of about 11,000 NASF. If the potential class laboratory utilization targets were used in the analysis, Fall 2012 would show an overage of 21,300 NASF which would decrease to an overage of 12,300 for the future enrollment level.

Classroom Utilization Comparison

	UW Whitewater	UW System	POTENTIAL UW System
Weekly Rooms Hours	31	35	40
Percent of Seats Filled	61%	70%	70%
Weekly Seat Hours	18.4	24.5	28.0

Class Laboratory Utilization Comparison

The table below shows the outcome of the classroom and class laboratory needs assessment using the existing utilization expectations and using the potential utilization targets.
