

Pattern Bodiform Potential Licensing Partner Search

Introduction

The following report includes an investigation into potential partners for the Pattern Bodiform.

WISC interviewed 16 manufacturers of adjustable dress forms and/or mannequins*:

Econoco Corporation	Polly Products Company
Goldsmith Inc.	Davis Enterprises
Bay Area Display San Francisco	Triple A Enterprises/Wooster Novelty
Barnhart, Carol	Cyberform Corporation
Lifestyle Form Company Inc.	Venus Mannequin Display
Wolf Form Company	Avondale Adventure/Holey Cards (Dress Rite Form)
Greenberg Display	Dorfman Museum Figures Inc.
Characters Unlimited	Studio One Midwest

We posed the following questions to the company representatives:

- * What type of products does your company manufacture?
- * How are your products distributed? Where are they distributed?
- * Does your company have experience in the area of new product development?
- * Have you licensed in products from the outside in the past?
- * Will your company sign non-disclosure/confidentiality agreements?
- * At what stage of development should the product be?
- * What information on the product, market, and/or developer does the company expect?
- * Who is the appropriate contact person for submissions?

* We contacted seven companies found in the Thomas Register On-line, 26 companies identified in Dun & Bradstreet Market Identifiers On-line, and two companies from the New Product Feasibility Assessment (conducted by WISC for the Pattern Bodiform). Sixteen of the companies were willing to participate in our interviews. Six companies do not license, five do not produce related products, two were unwilling to participate, two were not interested, and four companies were contacted, but have not responded to our request for interview (see end of summary for a specific company breakdown). The companies that claimed they were not interested are based on our initial introduction of the product; we informed the companies that we were working with a client that has developed an innovative, adjustable, dress form.

Summary of Partner Interviews

Fifteen of the companies indicated they have experience in the area of new product development. Specific new products, which have been recently introduced, included:

- Dress form (Econoco)
- Mannequins (Goldsmith, Greenberg Display, Triple A, Venus Mannequin Display, Dress Rite)

- Santa Clause, bear, and Dalmatian mannequins (Bay Area Display)
- Larger male torso (Davis Enterprises)
- Hand form for gloves (Cyberform)
- Conservation form (Dorfman Museum)
- Garment rack (Lifestyle Form)

The representative from Barnhart, Wolf Form, Characters Unlimited, and Polly Products did not report on specific recently introduced products, or have not recently introduced a new product.

All of the companies indicated that they would be willing to look at ideas from outside the organization. Also, all of the companies (except Triple A) indicated they are willing to sign non-disclosure/confidentiality agreements; the representative from Triple A noted that they might be willing to sign a non-disclosure agreement.

Regarding licensing, 7 of the 16 companies have successfully licensed in the past. Specifically, Barnhart indicated they have licensed a sculpture that was turned into a mannequin. Venus Mannequin Display licensed a new mannequin. Econoco has licensed in floor fixtures and Davis Enterprises has licensed in a z-hook to hang accessories. Bay Area Display, Characters Unlimited and Polly Products did not note any specific examples.

Regarding the stage of development required for a product to be considered, eight of the companies look at products at any stage of development (Goldsmith, Bay Area Display, Barnhart, Lifestyle Form, Polly Products, Triple A, Cyberform, and Studio One Midwest). Dress Rite prefers to see patented products. Econoco and Davis Enterprises prefer to see the idea first; if the company and developer decide to progress further, then a prototype would be needed. Also, Wolf Form and Characters Unlimited prefer to see the product in the idea stage, but did not specifically note that a prototype would need to follow. Greenberg and Dorfman Museum prefer to see the product in the prototype stage. Venus Mannequin Display will look at ideas only, but prefers to see prototypes.

The level of information expected on the product, market, and developer varied from company to company. Ten of the companies did not have specific expectations (Econoco, Wolf Form, Characters Unlimited, Davis Enterprises, Triple A, Cyberform, Venus Mannequin Display, Dress Rite, Dorfman Museum, and Studio One Midwest). Goldsmith would like information on the material to be used, volume of distribution desired, and any available product and market information. Bay Area Display would like information on what the developer expects of the company and as much information as the developer may have on the product. Barnhart Carol would like information on material needed, market conditions, volume of distribution desired, and any other relevant information the developer may have. Lifestyle Form would like information on the material to be used, and where and how much distribution is desired. Greenberg Display would like information on why the product is unique, what materials are needed, and product specifications. Polly Products would like information on the quantity of production desired and as much information on the product as the developer may have.

The appropriate contact person for each company is included in the matrix and individual company interviews. Product information and company information, when available, are included in the individual company attachments.

Conclusion

From the 16 companies interviewed, the following 15 companies appear to initially warrant further investigation:

Econoco Corporation

Goldsmith Inc.

Bay Area Display San Francisco

Barnhart, Carol

Lifestyle Form Company Inc.

Wolf Form Company

Greenberg Display

Characters Unlimited

Polly Products Company

Davis Enterprises

Triple A Enterprises/Wooster Novelty

Cyberform Corporation*

Venus Mannequin Display

Dress Rite Form*

Dorfman Museum Figures

These companies are all willing to review outside ideas for licensing, and the client's current stage of development meets all of the companies' stage of development requirements--the client's product is both patented and prototyped. (Studio One Midwest, the only company not listed, is a contract manufacturer; the company is willing to review outside ideas, but does not appear to have experience in marketing products.)

*The representative from Cyberform indicated the company was very interested in learning more about the product and in hearing from the developer/client as soon as possible. Additionally, the representative from Dress Rite Form also indicated that the company was very interested in the client's product.
